

State Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (SPDES) Priority Ranking List 2008/2009

The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (NYSDEC) is providing the Environmental Benefit Permit Strategy (EBPS) priority rankings in conformance with section 17-0817(6.) of the Environmental Conservation Law. The lists are based on a ranking system that prioritizes permits for full technical review and, when necessary, modification. The full technical review is conducted in one of nine regional offices or the central office, depending on the location of the discharge and whether the permit has been assigned to the central office based on USEPA designation as a major discharge or state designation as a centralized significant industrial permit.

The EBPS priority ranking system should not be confused with the SPDES permit renewal process. Most permits are renewed prior to expiration by a separate administrative procedure. At times, these renewals will be delayed to address necessary modifications to the permit.

The 2008 SPDES permit lists can be viewed at the NYSDEC website <http://www.dec.ny.gov/permits/6054.html>. The lists are based on ranking scores and reflect the priority list for each office. The ranking scores are updated on a continuous basis due to the discovery of new information and the issuance of modifications that eliminate the factors which go into each score. The top 10% of each list represents a workload objective during this fiscal year. Additional information describing the EBPS process follows the ranking lists. Fact Sheets for individual permits (provide detailed information for the ranking score of each individual permit) are available by contacting Don Ackerman at (518) 402-8210, by e-mail at dwackerm@gw.dec.state.ny.us, or at the address listed below.

Any interested party may provide, at any time, substantive comments requesting a change in a permit's rank based on the grounds that newly discovered material information exists; that a material change in environmental conditions has occurred; or that relevant technology or applicable law or regulations have changed since the issuance of the existing permit. All such requests shall be in writing and contain facts or reasons supporting the request. Comments must be sent to Director, Bureau of Water Permits, NYSDEC, 625 Broadway, Albany, NY 12233-3505.

During the 2007/2008 permitting year, the NYSDEC had draft permits out for public comment for 11 percent of the 2007/2008 EBPS list. Of this 11 percent, 6.6 percent had final permits issued.

ENVIRONMENTAL BENEFIT PERMIT STRATEGY

To avoid a backlog of SPDES permit applications, the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) Division of Water (DOW) adopted the Environmental Benefit Permit Strategy (EBPS), which established procedures which solved the backlog and at the same time was beneficial to the environment.

The Problem

The 1972 Clean Water Act requires SPDES permit renewals every five years. In New York State, the renewal process included DEC administrative and technical review plus public notification and review of the draft permit. It typically took about a year to complete this process and renew a permit.

Modification of a permit could be initiated sooner than five years to accommodate changes in regulation or changes in the operating procedure of the permittee.

This system worked well for a while, but, as time went on, the permits became more numerous and more complex. In addition, staffing levels relative to the workload fell. The DOW began to accumulate a backlog of permits that it was unable to complete in a given year. The backlog was as high as 450 permits and leveled off to about 350 permits.

This meant that some permits that sorely needed to be modified to protect the waters of the state were stuck for years at the bottom of the chronological review pile. Other permits that needed only renewal, not modification, were being subjected to the same rigorous technical review as those requiring major modifications. This seemed to be an inefficient use of staff time considering most permits had previously been subjected to 2 or 3 rigorous technical reviews.

The DOW had to find a better way to do business in order to prevent work from piling up. We simply did not have enough staff to grind out extensive technical reviews every five years for all SPDES permits. The way we did business in 1972 was not working well for us now.

DOW began to look for a better, more environmentally responsive and efficient way to manage the workload. Focusing staff time on modifications of the most deficient permits (in terms of environmental need and the need to better reflect current standards and regulations in the permit) would result in better protection for the environment and help ease the backlog. The result was the EBPS.

The Solution

The DOW uses the EBPS to manage the workload of renewing existing SPDES permits. Section 17-0817 of the Environmental Conservation Law was amended, effective August 2, 1994, authorizing this EBPS strategy. This strategy represents a shift from a full technical review of permits in chronological order, as they expire, to one of establishing priorities for reviewing permits based on the environmental benefit that will be gained by modifying the permit. (Note: Modifications are any technical changes that need to be made to the permit. They can be initiated by the permittee or be DEC-initiated under EBPS. They can occur because of a change in regulations, a change in the operation of the facility or a compliance problem.)

The EBPS system has three parts:

1. New permits and permittee-requested modifications will follow the same procedure as has always been required in accord with the Uniform Procedures Act (UPA) time frames.
2. Administrative renewal of all permits happen based on a short form filed prior to permit expiration.
3. Full technical review, to determine if a permit needs modification, will be performed by the DOW technical staff in priority order - based on a ranking system developed for the EBPS.

EBPS Ranking Procedures

Under the EBPS system, a permit will receive a numerical score for each of 13 factors (see Table 1 below) as they apply to that particular permit, using a SPDES PRIORITY RANKING WORK SHEET for doing the scoring (see Attachment 1). For instance, if a permit needs to be modified due to a consent order or permit compliance issue, it gets 10 points. If it is a permit for an existing facility that needs to be adjusted for a parameter covered by new EPA Technology Regulations, it gets 5 points. In addition, a companion document entitled Guidance For Use Of Permit Priority Ranking Factors (see Attachment 2) is used to assist with the evaluation of the ranking factors.

Each individual factor value is multiplied by one of three Water Quality Enhancement Multipliers (see Table 2) that describe the general environmental benefit of modifying the permit to address that factor:

1. The modification will eliminate a water quality standards violation, a water use impairment or, correct other serious environmental problems = 10.
2. The modification will significantly reduce but not eliminate a water quality standards violation, water use impairment or serious environmental problem = 5.
3. The modification will have little or no effect on a water quality standards violation, water use impairment or serious environmental problem = 1.

The products of these multiplications are summed. A longevity score, based on the length of time that has passed since the permittee filed a long form SPDES application (including effluent monitoring data) is added. This final score establishes the priority of the permit, a higher score indicating higher priority.

Any DOW staff or member of the public can request the SPDES PRIORITY RANKING WORKSHEET for a permit (subject to FOIL) and contribute information to the ranking process. All returned worksheets will be reviewed by staff from the DOW Bureau of Water Permits.

The above process can be summarized with the following formulas:

Factor Score = [Factor Value per Priority Ranking Factor] x [Environmental Multiplier]

Longevity Score = [5 (Major) or 3 (Non-Major)] x [No. years since filing a Long Form Application, with sampling]

Total Work Sheet Priority Score = \sum Factor Scores + Longevity Score

Total Permit Priority Score = \sum Non-Overlapping Work Sheet Scores

EBPS Priority Ranking List and Public Notice

The EBPS system requires the Department to put out for public notice annually the EBPS Priority Ranking List. The purpose of the EBPS Priority Ranking List is to give the public an opportunity to comment on the suitability of a priority ranking score and to provide additional information that may affect a change to a permit's score.

The EBPS Priority Ranking List shows the priority ranking scores, indicating which permits are due for full application submittal by the permittee, full technical review by the DOW, and Department-initiated modification of the SPDES permit when warranted. The higher the Total Worksheet Priority Score, the higher the priority for full technical review and modification. The EBPS Priority Ranking List is formulated by developing separate sub-lists for Central Office permits and permits originating in each Regional Office, for a total of ten sub-lists to be combined into one EBPS Priority Ranking List for publication. When the EBPS Priority Ranking List is finalized, it is published annually in the Environmental Notice Bulletin (ENB) in April of each year.

Who Benefits?

The environment: The process has augmented DOW's ability to improve water quality by directing staff resources to permits with the greatest potential environmental benefits.

The Agency: DOW is able to set priorities and manage its workload more efficiently. The backlog of permit renewals has been almost totally erased.

The Applicant: - The new process should decrease the time, paperwork and cost of permit renewals. Facilities will be less likely to be operating under an expired permit.

The Public: Under the EBPS, private citizens, as well as professionals, can participate in determining the priority rank of a permit.

Water Quality Enhancement Descriptions and Multipliers for SPDES Permits Under the EBPS

Water Quality Enhancement	Multiplier
The facility is the sole source or a major source of the pollutant and modification of the SPDES permit is likely to cause a major improvement to water quality; will eliminate a WQ standard(s) violation as determined by a TMDL analysis resulting in a WLA, will eliminate a water use impairment as identified by the PWP list; or correct other important environmental problems.	10
The facility is one of several sources of the pollutant; modification of the SPDES permit will result in reduction of contribution to a water body with a WQ standard(s) violation as determined by a TMDL analysis resulting in a WLA; will reduce a water use impairment as identified by the PWP list; the WQ standard(s) violation or use impairment will not be eliminated by the modification.	5

GUIDANCE FOR USE OF PERMIT PRIORITY RANKING FACTORS

Factor No.

- 1 New York State has developed a Combined Sewer Overflow (CSO) Strategy in conformance with USEPA Clean Water Act program guidance. This strategy calls for the State to implement a series of CSO controls through the mechanism of specific SPDES permit conditions. An example of a “primary” CSO requirement would be the submission of a Facility Plan to control or eliminate CSOs known to be contributing to a water quality problem. An example of a “secondary” CSO requirement would be updating the language in a SPDES permit to conform to the “No dry weather discharge” element of the State CSO Strategy.
- 2 The facility has been identified as subject to a Department initiative such as multimedia permitting, watershed TMDL implementation, or Discharge Notification Act requirements.
- 3 Some elements of the Federal Industrial Pretreatment regulations are imposed by inserting specific requirements into municipal SPDES permits. An example of a “primary” pretreatment modification would be the insertion of “mini pretreatment program” language into a municipal SPDES permit in order to resolve a significant negative impact on the STP from industrial indirect discharges. A “secondary” pretreatment modification might be changes in the permit language to conform to federal regulations but which would not resolve any significant problems at the POTW or in the sewer system.
- 4 The Federal CWA requires Best Management Practice (BMP) plans for all industries which have SPDES permits and which have a potential for toxic contamination of storm water by “industrial activity.” Modification of a SPDES permit for a BMP would be of “primary” importance if, for example, the storm water discharges from the industry were known to contain PCBs. The modification would be of “secondary” importance if the addition of the BMP was a regulatory requirement but was not presently associated with any toxic discharge from the permitted site.
- 5a The permit in question has been identified as potentially needing an effluent limit for a Bioaccumulative/Persistent Toxic Substance. See Attachment 5 for the list of substances.
- 5b The permit is identified as needing to be modified to add or change an important effluent parameter because: the receiving water body has been formally reclassified (not just proposed for reclassification) to a higher water quality standard; or a new water quality standard or guidance value has been published for a parameter in the effluent; or a new substance has been identified in the effluent which is important to the achievement of best usage or a water quality standard in the receiving water body.
- 5c The permit needs to be modified to add or change another parameter such as a water treatment chemical, pH, temperature, or suspended solids limit or action level, that has a very low probability of causing a water quality problem.
- 6a Permit needs to be modified to add or change an effluent limit parameter that is incorporated in a newly promulgated USEPA wastewater treatment technology regulation for Best Available Treatment Technology Economically Achievable (BAT), Best Conventional Pollutant Control Technology (BCT), or New Source Performance Standards.
- 6b A permit drafting engineer concludes that an effluent parameter needs to be added or changed based on a reevaluation of Best Professional Judgement (BPJ) treatment technology.
- 7 The permit in question needs to be modified in order to resolve an issue of permit non-compliance or to ensure consistency between the permit and a court order or negotiated consent order. Examples include : a permittee that cannot verify compliance with a permit limit that proves to be lower than the effluent specific lab detectability limit; or a permittee that builds a BPJ treatment system to achieve a BPJ effluent limit (not an effluent limit based on water quality) only to find that the system cannot achieve the permit limit despite effective operation.
- 8 As required by the Federal Clean Water Act, USEPA and New York State are proceeding with initiatives which in the near future could trigger Antidegradation evaluations for facilities with an existing SPDES permit which: propose facility expansions which would result in increased discharges of pollutants; or presently have permit authorization to discharge toxics which exceed present day actual discharges of those toxics. (The Great Lakes Toxic Initiative is the most highly developed initiative at this time.) This priority evaluation factor will only be utilized when these initiatives are finalized and implemented.

GUIDANCE FOR USE OF PERMIT PRIORITY RANKING FACTORS

Factor No.

- 9 Under Section 304(1) of the Federal Clean Water Act, the USEPA is obligated to list specific discharges which must be upgraded with Individual Control Strategies (ICS) to further control toxic releases. This factor will be associated with SPDES permits which must be modified because they are listed in the 304(1) list and require an ICS (ICS is synonymous with SPDES/NPDES permits).
- 10 The State Revolving Fund (SRF) list identified projects which have applied for and are eligible for State & Federal loans to build needed sewerage and sewage treatment systems. This priority factor will be used for municipal permittees that are on the SRF list.
- 11 The permit in question should be modified to incorporate a requirement for whole effluent biological toxicity testing in conformance with the Department's's policy.
- 12 The Department has received substantive public interest in the facility's discharge.
- 13 The permit is associated with a major electric generating power plant and the permit needs modification to incorporate typical requirements for studies or control measures related to fish impingement or aquatic endangerment.
