

ASIAN LONGHORNED BEETLE (ALB) & COMMON LOOK-ALIKES

Department of Environmental Conservation

ASIAN LONGHORNED BEETLE

(Anoplophora glabripennis)

- Length: 1 to 1.5 inches
- Shiny black body with white spots
- Black & white banded antennae longer than its body

- You can find more information on ALB at:

<https://www.dec.ny.gov/animals/7255.html>

NON-NATIVE - REPORT IF FOUND

ALB is a serious threat to maple trees and other hardwoods. If you see this beetle in New York, contact the DEC at: foresthealth@dec.ny.gov

Look for exit holes in tree bark about the diameter of a pencil.

COMMONLY CONFUSED WITH ALB:

WHITE-SPOTTED SAWYER

(Monochamus scutellatus)

- Northeast native most often confused w/ALB
- Black to bronze body with white speckling and a white spot (absent on ALB)
- Antennae are longer than its body

white spot
(absent on ALB)

ASIAN LONGHORNED BEETLE (ALB) & COMMON LOOK-ALIKES

Department of Environmental Conservation

1. Asian Longhorned Beetle (Anoplophora glabripennis)
2. Eyed Click Beetle (Alaus oculatus)
3. Northeastern Pine Sawyer (Monochamus notatus)
4. Brown Prionid (Orthosoma brunneum)
5. White-Spotted Sawyer (Monochamus scutellatus)
6. Southern Pine Sawyer (Monochamus titillator)
7. Longhorned Beetle (Graphisurus fasciatus)
8. Broadnecked Root Borer (Prionus laticollis)
9. Western Conifer Seed Bug (Leptoglossus occidentalis)